Epidemic Sweeps Country

$20,000,000 Exposition

Next Wednesday, May 29, America's Exposition here will open.

Behind the barred gates of Balboa park, where the great Exposition is located, an army of men and women are laboring 24 hours a day to make this event possible.

The buildings, without exception, are complete.

More than a hundred new structures and many older ones are now beehives of activities. The vast expanse of floors is cluttered with an array of packing cases from the four corners of the earth.

In the midst of this seeming disorder, elaborate booths are rearing themselves in accordance with a carefully thought-out plan.

Railroad sidings are filled with loaded freight cars which are being emptied at a rapid rate. Long caravans of trucks parade the streets of San Diego from these sidings to the Exposition grounds. They are heaped high with every conceivable manner of things to be shown here.

Supplementing this rail transportation activity is another busy scene at the waterfront docks where ships discharge their cargoes.

There is another parade of motor trucks, almost the whole length of the nation's Pacific Coast, and these vehicles, too, are bringing loads of things here to be spread before the eyes of the millions of visitors who will come here this year.

The vanguard of these visitors—and it is an army in itself—is already here. San Diego's streets are thronged

Management of the Exposition has been completely reorganized without change of personnel. Heretofore the problem has been to get the Expostition within the limit set—which necessitated break-neck speed. Management, from now on until the Expostition closes, will be concerned with operations.

This has necessitated the employment of several thousand persons, some of whom had applications on file for months. Each of the applicants was personally interviewed when this was possible. The records of all of them were carefully scrutinized.

The Exposition will open at 8 a. m. on May 29. At noon, it is anticipated, the colors will be raised with appropriate ceremonies and various exhibit palaces will fling open their doors.

At 8 p. m. of that night, President Roosevelt in Washington will address the great crowds in the Exposition grounds over a national link-up of telephone lines. His voice will be amplified by 156 loud speakers situated thruout the Exposition area.

As his talk ends, the Exposition will be actually opened by two unknown orphan children—a boy and a girl—who will throw switches and the grounds' beautiful lighting will slowly become manifest. The children were chosen as a symbol of the future, to which the Exposition is dedicated. They will represent the present younger generation and the unknown generations to come.

San Diegans Say We Need Fishing Pier

According to the daily proceedings of the city council, that body on Tuesday was asked by The San Diegans, thru Roy Hegg, its president, to make a study of conditions surrounding sport fishing in San Diego and arrange to have a fishing pier built. This body says that sport fishing attracts a large following of visitors and that San Diego is the only city on the south coast that does not maintain a fishing pier. Hegg related that several attempts and suggestions for a pier have been made and suggests the council endeavor to select the best possible location.

For ten to twelve years now, perhaps longer, Ocean Beach (which is still a part of the city of San Diego) has been endeavoring to get a pleasure pier built here that would satisfy these many fishermen who drive fifty to a hundred miles to satisfy their ambitions along this line, as well as to attract the hundreds of vacationists who go farther north where these facilities are available. Along the surf at Ocean Beach as well as on our rocky cliffs, fishing has always been favorable. On the rocks at low tide are found thousands of mussels; in the bay waters are clams; these all make for attracting the ocean fish such as bass, croaker, corvina and a dozen other of the specie that feed near shore.

We understand the government has now given the city permission to extend a pier into the ocean here. The city engineer has drawn plans for a pier, the civic bodies, such as San Diego Chamber of Commerce as well as the San Diegans, have endorsed the matter in previous years but now it will have to be gone all over again with a new council, however, if we are persistent enough we may yet win the coveted pier.

PEABODY'S SELL SANDWICH SHOP ON NEWPORT AVE.

Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Peabody, proprietors of the O. B. Sandwich Shop, on Monday sold their business to Gene Dunphy of Yuma, Arizona.

Mr. Dunphy has visited Ocean Beach on numerous occasions during the summer season when he wanted a change from the sumer heat of Arizona. Last year he spent about four months here and decided he would like it well enough to locate permanently. Well Gene we extend you welcome for the Ocean Beach folks and hope the home folks and the Arizona and other visitors will make your stay worth while

Mr. and Mrs. Peabody have conducted their O. B. Sandwich shop for ten years or more and Newport avenue will be rather strange without their pleasant greetings. We hope they remain with us the greater part of each year, though we know their hankering to visit their children and relatives in other parts, so are sure we cannot keep them here all of the time.

Mr. and Mrs. Peabody tell us to thank their many friends and customers in Ocean Beach for their loyal support and recommend their successor and his family as worthy of continued patronage.

Pioneers Barbecue To Be Held June 29

A preliminary meeting was held Wednesday evening to plan for an Ocean Beach Pioneers Barbecue with representation from most civic organizations in attendance.

Frank B. McElwee was elected general chairman for the 1935 barbecue and the date set for the last Saturday in June, June 29th. A charge of 25c will be made the same as last year.

The committee for the barbecue dinner was appointed as follows: W. C. Madigan, Elmer Steele, Ralph Chadwick; Mesdames Dumont, Cunngham, Wsdom and Norris.

Committee on pageant and parade; Mrs. L. W. Lee, Mrs. Winnifred Davidson, Mrs. C. W. Varney and these to appoint two others.

For local entertainment the American Legion auxiliary.

For sports and evening street dance the Young Men's North Shore Political club.

Publicity; Heber Hartvigsen, Mrs. C. J. Schumacher, Julia T. McGarvey and A. W. Ostrom.

Permit committee: A. Dumont.

Band, tables and benches; Chamber of commerce.

Decorating; Ocean Beach Floral association and Kiwanis club.

Microphone and sound equipment; Carl Schroder.

Owing to the opening of the San Diego Exposition and Memorial Day these committees will not meet next week but another meeting called for Wednesday evening, June 5th.

GUS' PLACE NOW SERVING MEALS REGULARLY

Gus Marvin at 5049 Newport avenue has seen the necessity of additional facilities in the way of food at his place of business and according to announcement elsewhere in this issue is now serving full course dinners. Sybil J. Bell, manager and Mary Kidwell, assistant report they will specialize in hot sandwiches.

Estimate 2700 Attend Flower Show

This year's Ocean Beach Flower Show was generally acclaimed the finest of these annual occasions in perfection of bloom, number of exhibits and attractiveness of arrangement. More than 500 exhibits, representing more than 90 homes, were displayed and the approximate attendance was 2700. Mrs. Frank Barks was general chairman assisted by Mrs. Pearl Wood, Mrs. Amy Cunningham and C. Hudson.

Greeting the visitors at the show immediately in front of the entrance doors was an outstanding display of fifty varities of fuchsias, all in bloom, from the Rosecroft Begonia Gardens. Other commercial exhibits were made by Mrs. Amy Cunningham and Mrs. E. C. Hudson.

The display of roses were lovely on a background of black. While there was not the quantity of blooms in each exhibit some very fine buds were displayed.

Amongst the table of baskets was large showing of especially fine salpiglossis exhibited by Mrs. Robt. Warne. Snapdragons and larkspur from the home of Mrs. J. Marsh.

Wild flower table—Ocean Beach Women's Hiking club arranged by Lucile Harris.

Fruit table—Mrs. L. Van Hook, tropical fruits; C. Hardenburgh, Chinese lemons and Mexican limes; Mrs. F. W. Murray, cherimoyas; and Miss Eisler, grapefruit.

Featured exhibits were the lath house with many beautiful plants and ferns, also a low table covered with sand holding the best known members of the mesembryanthemum family. This table gave us a good idea of what our parkings will be like when they are all planted.

There were many outstanding exhibits of sweet peas, snapdragons, African marigolds, larkspur, petunias, pansies, corn flowers, African daisies, cacti and aloes, and geraniums.

Among the attractive showings of gladioli was a display by Mrs. John Milligan, showing high quality of bloom and strength of stem.

Home gardeners who made large or unusual exhibits were Mesdames Frank Barks, L. O. Van Hook, Ray F. Pommier, Robert Warne, W. R. Carmody, Elmer Dietz, George List, A. W. Ostrom and Bernard.

Table settings with floral decorations:

Mrs. Bert Werrich, card table luncheon, center piece of May basket bouquet, service of crystal.

Miss Florence Medlar, card table luncheon, center piece crystal swans holding violas and Cecil brunner roses. Service clear glass.

Mrs. Wendall Finley, lunch table, center piece red poppies in white pottery bowl, service green glass.

Mrs. Ed Wickern lunch table, center piece glass bubble bowl with single rose bud, service green glass.

Mrs. W. R. Carmody patio lunch table, center piece nasturtiums in black bowl, service English china.

Mrs. C. Fyler dinner table, water lily motif, serice amber topaz glass.

Many In Sunday Memorial Service

Arrangement have been completed for the annual memorial services to be held at the Bennington Monument Point Loma National Cemetery, Sunday, May 26. These services are in charge of the Lieut. Bert A. Allen post No. 2415, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, of Ocean Beach. This being the thirtieth year since the Bennington disaster in 1905 the largest and most pretentious service ever arranged for this purpose will be put on by the local post, their auxiliary and associating post. Leading members of various posts of the V. F. W. in San Diego have been selected to assist the local post in these services. Those in charge and taking active part in the ceremony being Comander Wm. C. Madigan, Bert A. Allen post, Ocean Beach. Senior vice commander, Wallace W. Scott Ramon F. Moreno post No. 1780, La Jolla. Junior vice commander Arthur Rousseau, O. K. Ingram ship No. 1774, San Diego. Chaplain John M. Anderson, Gordon M. Dawson post No. 1877, San Diego, Adjutant Wm. C. Schmitz, Cecil Connolly post No. 75, San Diego. Officer of the Day Geo. N. Speer, Bert A. Allen post No. 2415 Ocean Beach. Master of Ceremonies Capt. Fred H. Norris, Bert A. Allen post, Ocean Beach. Color bearers H. S. Remington and J. McCaffery, Bert A. Allen post and for the auxiliary, Florence Norris, president; Willema E. Padgett, chaplain; Mrs. J. McCaffery, Anna Madigan, Esther Lee Wisdom and Anna M. Speer, color bearers.

Other organizations who will participate and pay tribute at the ceremony are Grand Army of the Republic, G. A. R. Relief Corps, G. A. R. Circle, Sons and Daughters of the G. A. R., United Spanish War Veterans and auxiliaries, Sons of Veterans, Daughters of the Confederacy, County Council, American Legion, American Legion Auxiliary county council, Gold Star Mothers of the World War, Golden Poppy chapter American War Mothers, Disabled American Veterans and auxiliaries, County Council and auxiliary, County Council veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. Canadian Legion, Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts of America. Daddy A. J. Allen, father of Lieut. Bert A. Allen, after whom the local post is named; Mrs. Moreno mother of Ramon F. Moreno after whom the La Jolla post is named and others. Bonham Brothers trumpet trio, which has won distinction as the best in Southern California has been secured to render the musical selections. Commander F. C. Sheran, U. S. N., aid to Admiral W. T. Tarrant, commandant of the local Naval district will be the speaker of the day.

Members of the post and auxiliary will be busy all week preparing the necessary sprays, wreaths and other floral pieces necessary for this ceremony a total of over five hundred pieces being necessary for this year and again all residents of Ocean Beach who have flowers they are willing to donate for this purpose should inform G. N. Speer, BV 0006-R or H. S. Remington, BV 0990 who will orrange for the donations to be called for or bring your donations to the post meeting hall next to the police station Saturday, May 25th.

All residents of Ocean Beach who possibly can are urged to attend these services next Sunday, especially veterans of all wars who reside here or are living here or visiting at the time. Any wishing to attend who do not have means of transportation to and from the cemetery should contact either Comrade Speer or Comrade Remington and transportation will be arranged.

In that Ocean Beach is the only community in Southern California to have a National Cemetery and as this annual ceremony has consistently evolved upon the local veterans post it can and should be considered as our local observance if Memoral Day by the local residents. While the ceremony is held at the Bennington Monument before which all victims of this disaster are buried the services as a whole are conducted for all veterans of all wars and all those who gave their lives for our nation's cause in war or peace. Let us then the citizens of Ocean Beach pay tribute to our own and the Nation's dead by attending these services next Sunday at the Point Loma National cemetery.

NEWS ITEMS CUT SOME THIS WEEK

Several of our contributors will find their articles cut to essential news this week owing to the fact that nearly all items sent in, were received Wednesday afternoon. When our work is strung out from Monday to Thursday noon, it is easy to handle, but when half or more of the paper's news comes in during the last half day preceding time of going to press w e cannot give it the desired time and space that might be looked for by the publicity people of the various organizations.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

PEEK THINKS UNITED STATES NO LONGER IS THE BIG CREDITOR NATION.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
©, Western Newspaper Union.

GEORGE N. PEEK, in his capacity of advisor to the President on foreign trade, has just made public statistics that tend to show the United States is losing its position as the world's chief creditor nation, and makes recommendations that are in accord with the growing trend against internationalism in the administration and in conflict with Secretary Hull's program of removing barriers to international trade by reciprocal trade agreements.

George N. Peek

Stating that whether or not this country still owes less to other nations than they owe to it appears to depend on the true value of defaulted war debts, Mr. Peek recommends these immediate steps:

"1. The inauguration of a detailed study of our direct investments abroad and foreigners' direct investments in the United States, to supplement the studies now in progress of capital movements.

"2. A review of all national policies based in whole or in part upon our international creditor status."

The proposal seems to lead toward high tariffs and a policy of allocating our foreign trade among other nations, as is done by many of the European countries.

Figures compiled by Mr. Peek indicate that the United States is a net international creditor by $16,897,000,000, but this includes $10,304,000,000, principal amount of war debts owed by foreign governments, and also foreign bonds held by private investors in the United States invoiced at their face value, and a pre-depression estimate of the value of American branch factories abroad and other direct investments in foreign countries. Mr. Peek strongly infers that a re-estimation of these "assets" will result in such a scaling down that this country will no longer be a creditor nation and need not act as such.

By his recommendation for a review of all our national policies based in whole or in part on our international credit status, Mr. Peek unquestionably means that there will be no further validity to the argument that as a creditor nation we must open our markets to imported goods, and that imports need be only sufficient to balance current exports, taking into consideration such invisible items of international trade as shipping services and tourist expenditures.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT strongly resented the criticism of his New Deal policies by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and retorted by calling to the White House Secretary Roper's business planning and advisory council for an endorsement of NRA extension and the social securities program. Then to the newspaper correspondents Mr. Roosevelt scored the action of the chamber, asserting that in too many cases so-called business organizations misrepresent the business men for whom they claim to speak, and that he did not believe a single speech made at the chamber's meeting contained any mention of the human side of the picture. He declared the business organizations were not indicative of the mass belief and that he would go along with the great bulk of the people.

Several members of the business advisory council were also members of the Chamber of Commerce, and it is said they resented the President's action in seemingly using them to offset the attack by the chamber. Some of them were on the point of resigning from the Roper council, but were placated by Mr. Roosevelt who assured them their views were highly valued.

IN THE crash of a transport plane of Transcontinental Western Air near Atlanta, Mo., Senator Bronson M. Cutting of New Mexico and four other persons fell to their death. The pilot was unable to land at Kansas City because of a dense fog and his fuel gave out before he could reach an emergency landing field at Kirksville. Besides Mr. Cutting those killed were Miss Jeanne A. Hillias of Kansas City, Mrs. William Kaplan of West Los Angeles, and Harvey Bolton and K. H. Greeson, pilots, both of Kansas City. Eight passengers were seriously injured.

Senator Cutting

Bronson Cutting, a millionaire of an aristocratic family, was a radical Republican and was one of the outstanding members of the senate. He supported Mr. Roosevelt for President in 1932, but when he came up for reelection last fall he was not given the endorsement of the administration. His victory was contested by Dennis Chavez and the case is still before the senate elections committee. Mr. Cutting was born on Long Island in 1888, graduated from Harvard and there after went to New Mexico. In the World war he was an infantry captain and assistant military attache at the American embassy in London. He was appointed to the senate in 1927 to fill a vacancy and was elected next year to a six year term.

The senate on being advised of the tragedy adjourned out of respect to the memory of Senator Cutting, and the house cut short its session.

AFFIRMING a decision of the Supreme court of the District of Columbia, the United States Supreme court held unconstitutional the railroad retirement act, ruling that many of its provisions are invalid. The act provided for a system of old age pensions for all railroad workers. The decision was read by Justice Owen J. Roberts. It condemned many provisions of the law as "arbitrary," placing an undue burden on the railroads and having no relation to safety and efficiency in the operation of the railways.

The act was passed by the Seventy-fourth congress just before it closed, and had the tacit approval of the new administration, although President Roosevelt said he believed it would have to be perfected by amendment. It set up a compulsory pension plan, requiring contributions by both the carriers and the benefited employees. The District of Columbia courts held that the law went too far when it included intrastate as well as interstate employees and when it gave workers retirement credit for the time they had spent in the service prior to passage of the act.

ALL the vast British empire celebrated the silver jubilee of King George V and Queen Mary—the twenty-fifth anniversary of their accession—and for three months there will be a continuous series of fetes in the United Kingdom and all the dominions and dependencies. London, of course, was the scene of the chief celebration on the opening day, and the metropolis was thronged with visitors. Hotels and rooming houses were overcrowded and the king ordered that Hyde Park be kept open so some of the overflow thousands could sleep there.

King George

There were seven state processions the first day. The first was that of the speaker of the house of commons, Capt. Edward A. Fitzgerald, with five ancient gilded coaches; the second, that of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, with six coaches in which rode the dominion prime ministers. Then came a two-coach procession of Lord High Chancellor Sankey, and one of the lord mayor of London, Sir Stephen Killik. The fifth procession was that of the duke of York, from Buckingham palace, two carriages with a captain's escort of the magnificently appareled royal horse guards.

The prince of Wales, as heir to the throne, came sixth. He had with him a captain's escort of the Life Guards and two carriages, in the first of which he rode with Queen Maud of Norway and his brother, the duke of Gloucester, like him, a bachelor.

Finally, in the most gorgeous parade of all, came George and Mary, and as their ornate coach, drawn by the famous grays, passed, the voices of all loyal Britishers rose in a roar of "God bless the king and queen." The rulers, accompanied by all the other notables, went to St. Paul's cathedral to give public thanks to God.

DISREGARDING the wishes of President Roosevelt, the finance committee of the senate adopted and reported for passage a simple resolution continuing the national recovery act until April 1, 1936, and at the same time making these provisions:

Donald Richberg

1. No price fixing shall be permitted or sanctioned in codes, except in those relating to mineral or natural resources which now have price fixing provisions.

2. No trade engaged in intrastate commerce shall be eligible for a code.

3. The President is given specified time in which to review present codes to carry out the conditions laid down in the first two exceptions to the resolution.

Both President Roosevelt and Donald Richberg, head of the NRA, had urged the passage of a new two-year NRA bill which would set up a stricter dictatorship over business and industry. The senate finance committee, however, would not consent to this and instead passed the resolution, which was drawn up by Senator Clark of Missouri and approved by Chairman Pat Harrison. Twelve senators first called at the White House and the President seemed willing to accept the continuing resolution until Mr. Richberg came in and protested urgently; whereupon Mr. Roosevelt turned it down. The committee then took the action noted by a vote of 16 to 3, defying both the President and Richberg.

BAHIA, third city of the republic of Brazil, was overwhelmed by furious storms and torrential rains, and the destruction was extended to all the surrounding country. Communications were demoralized, but fragmentary reports told of terrible scenes of death and devastation. It was believed that at least 400 lives were lost and probably 2,000 persons rendered homeless. Rescue and relief work was being carried on as well as possible by hundreds of soldiers and the government agencies.

TWO thousand young Catholics of Germany made an Easter pilgrimage to Rome, and on their return home they were treated as political suspects, stripped of their mementoes and held for a time in a concentration camp. Addressing another group of Pilgrims from Germany, Pope Pius made a strong protest against this action of the Nazis who, he said, "wish in the name of so-called positive Christianity to de-Christianize Germany, and they wish to conduct the country back to barbaric paganism, and nothing is left undone to disturb Christian and Catholic life."

THE senate committee named to devise a means of curbing such attacks on the President as are frequently made by Huey Long on the floor of the senate has not yet reported, but it is said Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri has figured out how it can be done. Clark is the upper chamber's chief expert on parliamentary procedure and for four years he was parliamentarian of the lower house. His plan is to rewrite rule 19 of the senate rules to include the President and so protect him from unwarranted attacks and slanders. That rule reads at present:

Senator B. C. Clark

"No senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another senator or to other senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a senator."

One of Long's favorite ways of launching his diatribes is to rise to a question of personal privilege, and Clark proposes that in this respect the senate rules be changed to conform with those of the house. In that body when a member feels he has been aggrieved he must explain exactly how he has been injured before he is permitted to speak. The speaker decides whether or not his injury is justified.

Senator Glass of Virginia has failed at various times to silence the "Kingfish" and he, too, has a plan he thinks might help accomplish that end. He recommends a requirement that all amendments offered to an appropriation bill be germane. Such a requirement would affect other senators, but Glass' move admittedly is directed against Long.

YUGOSLAVIA'S dictatorship will be continued and enlarged, for Premier Yevtitch's government party won a sweeping victory at the polls; this, despite the fact that the small towns and villages of Croatia gave an overwhelming vote for the opposition leader, Dr. Vladimir Matchek.

IN THE name of 400,000 Knights of Columbus, Martin H. Carmody, supreme knight of the order, has sent to President Roosevelt a letter urging American diplomatic intervention on behalf of Catholics in Mexico. The matter has been up in congress at various times but quite naturally the administration is hesitant about interfering in what Mexico considers a domestic affair.

SECRETARY ICKES' Department of the Interior has now been elevated to the level of the State, Treasury and Agriculture departments, for congress has granted one of Harold's dearest wishes and given him an undersecretary, whose salary is to be $10,000 a year. This was a senate amendment to the Interior department appropriation bill, and was accepted by the house, 243 to 92, only after considerable pressure had been applied by the administration. Many of the house Democrats have asserted that Mr. Ickes snubbed them, and they would have liked nothing better than to administer a rebuke to him by defeating the amendment, but the party leaders drove them into line.

POLICE of Havana apparently are well on the way to solution of the mystery of the fire which destroyed the Ward liner Morro Castle, and other recent marine disasters. They have arrested three men, all natives of Catalan province in Spain, and say that they found on their persons letters of instructions concerning the destruction of the steamship Magallanes of the Spanish line, which was soon due in Havana. The documents, according to the authorities, ordered the accused to "take necessary action to precipitate a disaster similar to that of the Morro Castle." The police say the prisoners are well-known anarchists.

FOREIGN MINISTER PIERRE LAVAL of France and Ambassador Potemkin of Russia finally fixed up the mutual assistance pact between the two countries in a way acceptable to both and it was signed in Paris. M. Laval then prepared to leave for Moscow, planning to stop in Warsaw en route.

It would seem that Laval had his way with the treaty, for it subordinates military action of the two powers to the procedure of the League of Nations, to provisions of the Locarno pact and also to the Franco-Polish alliance.

ARIZONA'S victory over the government in the Parker dam case ruled on by the Supreme court alarmed the New Dealers for the safety of some of their other big projects of the same nature. The court decided that Secretary Ickes, as public works administrator, was without authority to dam navigable rivers unless specifically ordered by congress and that the law creating the PWA had not listed any such specific projects as the Parker dam.

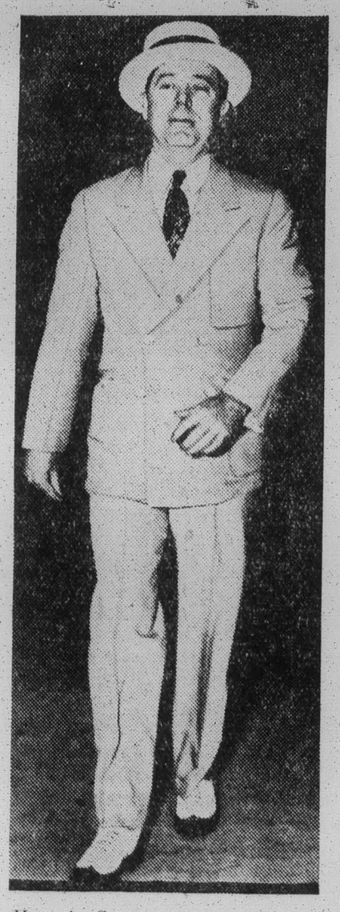
Father Neptune Opens West Coast Bathing Season

When the weather seemed propitious and the water warm enough at Santa Cruz, Calif., Father Neptune came ashore to open the bathing season for that region, including San Francisco, and was greeted by a bevy of lovely swimming girls.

HUEY'S STYLE SHOW



Here is Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana as he appeared in Washington in all the glory of his new spring garb. The Kingfish said: "I had to come back to show these people how to dress." His costume consisted of a straw hat with gay band, a tan tropical suit, lavender shirt with checks, red and green tie and tan and white sports shoes.

Here are John Hays Hammond, Jr., and the Diamantina, converted rum-runner which he has refitted and on which he proposes to sail around the world. Hammond will try to discover the locality and cause of certain dead spots at sea where radio waves are inactive, and also will promote the development of faster and more efficient sailing craft to compete with power vessels.

Good Military Students Get Medals

Secretary of War Dern presented Pershing gold medals to eighteen young men from the C. M. T. C. and R. O. T. C. of the nine corps areas for excellence of attainment in military education. In the photograph Mr. Dern is seen giving his medal to Alexander E. Lawson of Mt. Olive, Ill.

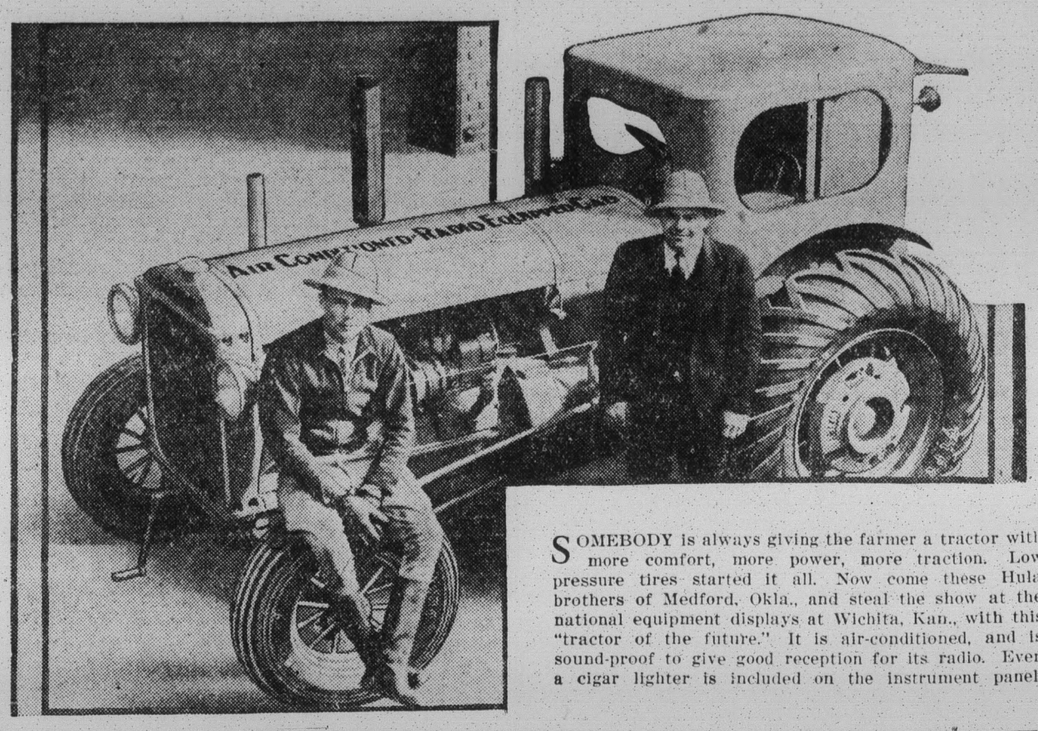
"Poor as Job's Turkey"

The expression "poor as Job's turkey" is evidently derived from the same source as the simple "poor as Job." Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable says that "poor as Job's is an allusion to Job's being deprived by Satan of everything he possessed.

Baby Mollusk Productive

As the baby mollusk grows, he develops on his back a "mantle" which contains building materials, such as carbonate of lime and other substances which the little mollusk secretes more and more as layer upon layer is added to the shell.

Even the Farmer Gets Air Conditioning



SOMEBODY is always giving the farmer a tractor with more comfort, more power, more traction. Low pressure tires started it all. Now come these Hula brothers of Medford, Okla., and steal the show at the national equipment displays at Wichita, Kan., with this "tractor of the future." It is air-conditioned, and is sound-proof to give good reception for its radio. Even a cigar lighter is included on the instrument panel.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

DANNY HAS THE SHAKES

Of all the chills of which you hear
There's no chill like the chill of fear.

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE sighed with thankfulness and relief as he reached the other side of the Laughing Brook by way of the old log which had fallen across it, thus making a bridge. To be sure he was a long, long way from his snug little home, where Nanny Meadow Mouse was anxiously waiting for him, but at least he was on the right side of the Smiling Pool and the Laughing Brook. He no longer needed to think of the Big Pickerel or of Snapper the Turtle. He had left Billy Mink and Reddy Fox way back by the Smiling Pool, so he felt quite safe from them.

Crept to the Entrance and Peeped Out.

Of course when he should reach the edge of the Green Meadows and start across to his snug little home he would have to watch for Reddy or Old Granny Fox, but just now he felt quite safe and it was a very good feeling indeed.

Being at last on the right side of the Laughing Brook, Danny felt that he had earned a rest, but having the wisdom of long experience he first looked for a place where he could rest in safety. Just a few feet from the end of the log on which he crossed the Laughing Brook was another old log. At once Danny scampered over to it for he long ago learned that old logs are quite likely to be hollow and when they are they make the very finest retreats in all the Great World for timid little people who wish to keep out of sight.

Just as he hoped, this old log was hollow and the only entrance was through an old knot hole barely big enough for Danny to squeeze through. Making sure that no one else was there, Danny squeezed in and promptly forgot all his recent troubles and was happy, which fortunately is the way of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows.

In two minutes Danny was fast asleep. How long he slept he didn't know but suddenly he was wide awake. He heard nothing, but he had a feeling of uneasiness. He crept to the entrance and peeped out. The moonlight lay full on the old log across the Laughing Brook and even as he looked a slim dark form leaped up on the farther end and began to run swiftly across with nose close to the old log.

It was Billy Mink, and Danny knew Billy's wonderful nose had found his scent somewhere on the other bank and that it would lead Billy straight to that hollow log. And so it happened. It was scarcely a minute before Billy's nose was poked in at the knot hole and Billy took one long sniff. "Ah, ha," said Billy. "So this is where you are. Come out like a gentleman and be eaten."

Danny said nothing, but he began to shake as with the cold. It was the chill of fear. He was trapped.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have an uncle who swears from morning till night. I never heard such language as he uses. Where in the world do you think he learned to swear like that?

Sincerely,
HELEN DAMM.

Answer: My dear Miss Damm, if your uncle does what you claim for him I assure you he could not have learned it any place, it must have been a gift.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a poor widow and have a hard time making both ends meet. I now find out that I could make some extra money by taking in washing. I don't know any people who send out their wash, so please tell me the best way to get in touch with those kind of people, will you?

Yours truly,
I. VOREESOPE.

Answer: Just put an ad in the newspapers to read as follows:

"A POOR WIDOW NEEDS WASHING."

And then give your address.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I met a boy at a dance last night and I like him very much. During our conversation, though, it seemed to me as if he was bragging a bit. He said that his brother lived in England and that he sits before the king and queen every day and keeps his hat on. Do you believe that?

Sincerely,
ROC A BBABY.

Answer: Sure I do. He is their chauffeur.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have just started in college and am taking up a course in gardening and farming. I have been paying particular attention to the caterpillar and have discovered they always climb trees and eat the leaves. Can you tell me how to keep them from eating the leaves?

Sincerely,
CHRIS. ANN TENUM.

Answer: Let them climb telegraph poles.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Do you believe hanging a man will stop crimes?

Truly yours,
ALEC TROCUTION.

Answer: I sure do. I have never heard of a man committing a crime after he was hanged.

HELPFUL HOME HINTS

IF THE cork is too large for the bottle in which you wish to use it, roll it under a board to elongate it, after soaking it a few minutes in hot water.

A handy device for holding the safety razor blade may now be found in the department stores.

A tablespoon of vinegar added to tough meat or chicken will soften the fiber and make it less tough. Use it in the water when cooking.

To make mint extract fill a bottle with the fresh mint and pack it in well; cover with alcohol and let stand for two weeks, then drain off and the extract is ready for flavoring and mint drinks. Use pure alcohol and it will be perfectly all right.

When steel ornaments, buckles and buttons of cut steel become tarnished rub them with unslaked lime and leave them in it for a short time, when they will be beautifully cleaned.

Suede shoes will be improved by rubbing them with fine emery paper.

Corn meal well moistened with gasoline will clean velvet hats, collars, and felt hats so that they will look fresh and new. Renew the corn meal after cleaning and go over the article to be sure it has been well done.

Save the bacon fat, pour water over it and allow it to settle. The fat will come to the top, the burnt particles sink into the water. Skim off the fat and use it for all sorts of cooking. Nice for french fried potatoes, hash browned, or it may take the place of butter in gingerbreads and spice cakes.

An ink remover—Pour a tablespoon or two of turpentine into a saucer, add some powdered soap, stir until dissolved, then bottle and keep for any such emergency as grease spots, or ink on carpet or rugs. If applied at once before the ink dries, the spots will come out. Rinse with warm water and rub dry.

Do YOU Know—

That the month of January was named after Janus, an early Roman divinity. It was added to the Roman calendar by Numa, 713 B. C., who made it the first month because Janus presided over the beginning of all business. In 1752 the legal year in England was ordered to begin on January 1 instead of on March 25.

SAM

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SAM is an officer walking our beat.
No one could live on a quieter street.
If there were a riot, our Sammy would quiet
The riot, and never disturb our repose.
Each child on our street when he goes to sleep, knows
He's under a special policeman's good care!
Sammy is there!

And many a child on our street when he prays
Says: "Please God, bless Sam, 'cause he has to sleep days!"
While children are sleeping, his watch he is keeping,
And sleeping is better because we have Sam.
The children sleep on if they hear a door slam,
He takes all the grief that they might have to bear!
Sammy is there!

Sometimes the dear children drift off into dreams,
And thinking of God, and of Sammy, it seems
That some one who's thinking of others, unwinking,
And thinking not once of himself, is so fine
He must have a lot in his heart that's divine.
So the children sleep tight, and the whole night is fair!
Sammy is there!

HAWAIIANS TURN TO PRESERVATION OF RACIAL GROUP

Not that the Hawaiian race is dying out—far from it—though it is certainly spreading out, by intermixture. But it is at the same time experiencing today a fresh grounding in its own subsoil through an increased "inmarrying"—that is, the tendency of part-Hawaiians to marry back into the Hawaiian group rather than to continue outward toward a further dilution of blood.

The Hawaiian people are a vigorous and prolific people, and their women are instinctive and devoted mothers. The race is experiencing now a period of recrudescence in numbers as well as in racial self-consciousness.

Curiously enough, this new racial self-consciousness is one quite unmistakable symptom of the changinng cultural life in the islands. It is a symptom not to be overlooked—this swing from an earlier enthusiasm for the "melting pot ideal," on the part of almost all elements in society, to the tendency to draw apart into self-conscious racial groups with cordial relations but a distinct feeling of difference in interests and background.

This finds its most practical expression in separate civic clubs and chambers of commerce. It is accentuated by the cultural clubs drawn along racial lines at the university and by the growing emphasis upon the study of racial heritage in the schools.—Elizabeth Green, in Asia Magazine.

POVERTY AND TAXES

Tax-paying time comes and goes—just now it has gone for the home-owner, and the assessor is making up another annual chart. With nearly 2,000 American municipalities on the verge of bankruptcy as the result of an orgy of spending, there is evidence that taxes will not be lowered in making up the new rolls.

We have long since planned our spending, not knowing where the money was coming from. This is why poverty and taxes go together. The big thing facing America today is to get more people to work in legitimate business, rather than to allow them to lose their morale on foolish, "freak" relief occupations. Then taxes will be paid easier, even while cities and towns do their spending.

LIVE AND LET LIVE

The one great slogan that seems to be emphasized today is "Live and Let Live." Guardians of traffic have tried almost everything conceivable, such as "Safety First." "Drive Carefully," "Stop, Look, Listen." Now the Automobile club of Southern California asks that you stick on the windshield of your car. "Live and Let Live." But accidents are on the increase, still. High powered cars pick up and are off in an instant. They become uncontrollable as quickly, and unless the motorist is strictly on his guard he is bound to have an accident. Pedestrians and jay-walkers are at the mercy of these machines. Unless the public learns and remembers the slogan, they will contribute to the toll of deaths through minor negligence and carelessness.

The most gigantic and world-famed engineering undertaking under construction today is given to the Oakland-San Francisco Bay steel bridge. Without hesitancy California is admittedly honored far greater than New York, when the Washington Bridge over the Hudson river in honor of George Washington, was completed. As a popular suggestion Congress may christen the western structure the Lincoln Bridge, in honor of Abraham Lincoln. The appropriateness of the name is emphasized by the fact that Lincoln Highway across the Continent begins with the eastern terminus of the Washington Bridge and its western terminus will finish at the west end of the Bay City Bridge. Not even New York City can outrival this structural undertaking, which when completed will be the finest and greatest bridge in the world, and is therefore deserving of a name typifying eminence, leadership and distinction. Abraham Lincoln deserves the honor of having this magnificent achievement at the Pacific terminus of the Lincoln Highway named for him.

Brazil is now under a new reciprocal trade union with the United States. Brazil now hopes to move closer to Argentina, leading in South American trade with the United States, which will mean a great trade benefit to all countries concerned. For the past 35 years we have been concerned. For the past 35 years we have been exporting agricultural implements to South America, principally to Argentina and Brazil, and through our methods of tilling the soil and handling crops, these southern countries have advanced in farm products and various kinds of manufacture. Very soon President Roosevelt is to call a world conference on field culture, of which cotton will be the leading commodity. South American agriculture has made wonderful strides within the past 25 years and the adoption of our own home methods has been the reason. Students and leaders in farm interests have visited our borders in years past to study the American ideas and technique for development work which they have carried into their own land.

Will automobiles be cheaper? This is being made an inquiry of late. Just listen to this: Germany is preparing for a summer drive into the world's automobile market by putting out a new car, to sell for $400—a real family vehicle to answer the demand for all. As Germany is not expecting to push sales at home, the dealers will cut their profits to build up a fund to push the car abroad. With 62 per cent of German motor production done by two firms, an American idea is to be tried—Germany will go in for organized mass production. In the United States there is one automobile to every five inhabitants, whereas Germany's ratio is only one to every 75 persons. In 1923 the United States sold Germany in one year nearly 475 million in goods and Germany sold 236 million dollars worth to the United States.

Surprising how many are being governed by their diet, instead of running the agent of food indulgence and then suffering the consequences. Correct eating is a rather recent art. People are studying calories, proteins, vitamines or what have you. There was a time when we studied table manners more than food values. Today, if you notice, more people seem to reject the former and have placed the art on the latter. Millions of Americans are giving the food subject more thought than ever before, but they are getting the big thrill from learning, not new things they can eat, but old things they can merrily do without. The secret back of this is simple—wholesomeness and happiness get a big impetus from appetite controlled.

The fishing season is a real event in California, more so than in most any other state. Our high mountain streams are abounding in trout. The fascination of getting into the altitudes where recreation and camp-life combine, add to fishing joys. There are many kinds of fishing; deep sea and large game is the goal of some. The hook and line off the ocean piers draws others, but for real scientific adventure in aristocratic fishing sport, the rod and reel for trout is the greatest wealth of pleasure and benefit to all sport lovers.

Lovers of flowers may make a pilgrimage in the open fields, hillsides and valleys almost any month of the year in California, especially the Southland during the months of moisture and wild growth, and feast their eyes to their hearts' content. Amid the insistent clamor of street noises, purring autos and the every-day turmoil of ceaseless activities, it s pleasant to draw away to these floral places of beauty and get the inspiration, for "Many a California flower, like the sweet-scented woodsy arbutus, is quite content to blossom all unseen."

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

By
Edson R. Waite
Shawnee, Oklahoma

No city can be greater than its citizens.

* * *

Some politicians seem to think they know it all, but do they?

* * *

Some cities sleep and dream—dream of the days gone by when they were busy places. They never dream of the future, of the awakening ambition to again be bigger and busier cities.

* * *

A Chamber of Commerce is an organization of the people in a community who desire to forward its welfare and who believe that they can accomplish more through co-operative effort.

* * *

"If some great power could raise the ghosts of the merchants of long ago and take them on a tour through our modern stores and newspaper plants how astonished they would be" so says James E. Barrett managing director of the Oklahoma Biltmore Hotel.

* * *

Home-town boosting is infectious; it spreads fast. It often keeps a community out of a rut. Boosting gathers momentum as it goes along. It gives pleasure, satisfaction and experience. It broadens the vision, destroys selfishness and makes every one see the brighter, happier side of community work.

* * *

You have a right to feel proud of this newspaper for the able and fearless way in which it works to build up a spirit of mutual confidence, real justice and constructive good will, for that is the foundation upon which a city is built.

The Tax Octopus Reaches Out

California is furnishing a farther example of the national political sport of tax boosting. Politicians wish to increase the gas tax from 3 to 4 cents a gallon, which would mean $12,000,000 more a year taken from the pockets of California motorists, in this instance. The excuse for this extra squeeze by the tax octopus, is the need for financing relief bonds.

Statistics just published show that in 1934, the owners of 2,120,000 automobiles in California paid $36,-432,612 state gas tax, $12,144,204 Federal gas tax, $10,000,000 (estimated) personal property taxes, $8,497,351 registration and other fees, $1,000,000 (estimated) Federal lubricating oil tax—or $68,-074,167.

In addition, new car buyers paid state and Federal sales and excise taxes of about $6,000,000 and those who bought accessories, tires, etc., paid state and Federal sales taxes of about $5,125,000. Contact and common carriers paid $1,032,768, or a total for automobile owners of $80,231,935 in one state, for one year.

Now they want to take another $12,000,000 from the motorists, or a super-grand total of $92,231,935 for one year.

And that's the present political trend. Tax piled upon tax! Taxes raised to the point of confiscation! When one industry has been bled white, start in on another! It's an insane proposition.

If the tax octopus finally crushes the life out of its victim, it will face starvation itself for lack of food to keep the thousands of little suction pumps on its tentacles supplied with nourishment.

The octopus of the sea is deadly, as every individual know, and will crush the life out of a person. But the tax octopus is more deadly, for it will crush the life out of a state or nation.

The joint Senate and Assembly committee on revenue and taxation on Thursday last week proposed the following sources of added revenue from taxation necessary practically to balance the budget:

1. Sales tax at 3% (with essential foods under Assembly Bill No. 122) $35,500,000.00
2. Additional sales tax revenue, under Assembly Bills Nos. 1271 and 1273 $4,800,000.00.
3. Additional bank and corporation franchise tax (4 to 8%) $17, 000,000.00.
4. Personal income tax $17, 500,000.
5. Spirituous liquor tax (80½ proof gal.) $9,000,000.
6. Revision of inheritance tax rates and exemptions $3,000,000.
7. Revision of truck tax $2,000.000.
8. Real estate transfer tax $6,000,-000.00.
9. State tax on motor vehicles in lieu of present local tax $18,-000.000.00

POINT LOMA EASTERN STARS

Point Loma chapter O. E. S. met in regular session Monday May 20th, Edythe F. Kenline, worthy matron and Harry P. Sweet, worthy patron, presiding. The evening being Star Point night, forty-seven Star Points of San Diego County were present. The present matrons and patrons escorted to the East were Lois L. Sorkness, Southern Star; Clara E. Mundo, San Diego; Etna B. Roberson. Corinthian; Iris M. Zaun, Silver Strand; Pearl D. Higgins, La Jolla; Janet M. Clayton, La Mesa; Lillian Gillespie. El Cajon; Martha P. King. Ramona; Nina B. Kirby. William Richley was manager and part owner of the Silver Spray plunge.

Earl J. Haas, now proprietor of the Sunnyside Market on Voltaire street was conducting Ocean Beach Feed, Fuel, Paint and Express business at 1926 Bacon street which he later sold to the Richleys.

Edgar F. Hastings, now chairman of San Diego county board of supervisors, was an advertiser as a contractor and builder.

O. F. Davis and son had a merry-go-round in their building at foot of Santa Monica avenue.

H. H. Reid and Son were proprietors of the Ocean Beach Lumber Co. and the Reid Transfer.

W. H. Culmer was president Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce and F. B. Harrison was secretary.

Ocean Beach was in great excitement of the "Color Line". Two or three negroes had settled here and citizens not wanting any of their race established here had invited them to leave, apparently two had not heeded the advice and their cottage was burned with a shot or two fired to scare them from the community. The scare had the desired effect. Two white men arrested and charged with arson were later released.

An eleven pound baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Carl May 17th. (Happy birthday Elaine.)

Rolla E. Brown, pastor of First Baptist church tendered his resignation.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Hook of 4720 Santa Cruz avenue returned from an extended trip to Yosemite valley and the Mariposa big trees. The journey was made by motorcycle and side car.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schroder had just bought a new "Overland four" and enjoyed a trip to Los Angeles and return.

(Copy of Ocean Beach poem)
(by June Custer Cooper)

In my mind there is a picture,
Of a spot that's dear to me,
In a little southern corner,
Of old "Calif." by the sea;
'Tis a playground for the masses,
Where they leave dull care behind.
And should you ever go there,
This you will surely find.

CHORUS

Ocean Beach, the Coney Island,
Of the old Pacific's shore;
Ocean Beach, I long to be there,
For there's pretty girls galore;
Ocean Beach, I always see you,
In my dreams of happy past;
And I know there is a future,
For old Ocean Beach, at last.

She will grow and keep on growing,
For there's space for many there,
And you will see oil derricks,
Towering high up in the air;
There will be a great excitement
In our city by the sea,
Health, wealth and pleasure all combined,
A rare treat it will be.

Repeat Chorus.

(POINT LOMA HIGH SCHOOL)

Marjorie Cooper, junior at Point Loma High, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Cooper of Azalea Dr., has just received honorable mention in an annual Scholastic magazine contest for one of the thirteen best letters, written by high school students of the United States, to the Boston Latin School congratulating the head master on the three hundredth anniversary of his school, the oldest public school in the United States.

Marjorie Cooper, last spring, placed as one of five young Point Loma High essayists in the Bank of America contest in which another Point Loma girl was the youngest winner in the state.

The English classes at Point Loma High, which specialize in writing themes on subjects of current interest, sent thirty-six letters to the Boston Latin school master from the classes of A. Bess Clark, the same classes from which Lois Walsh won the American Citizenship essay contest recently.

Mother Hahn, for no one ever calls her merely Mrs. Hahn at Point Loma High, had a pleasant surprise last week, Friday, when she entered her supply office in the basement. Covering towels and what not, were flowers and more flowers. Mother Hahn thought for a second or two and rightly concluded, after reading a sign considerately left for her illumination, that this was a surprise birthday shower from some one or other. For Mother Hahn had a birthday coming on Sunday, May 19.

As she herself says, "Birthdays are overlooked when you've had as many as I've had." But a group of Loman girls didn't agree with Mother Hahn on that single point; thus the flower shower. Many, many happy birthdays ahead, Mother Hahn. We like you!

Myron B. Green's wife celebrated her husband's Thursday and Friday performances of the Schubert opera "Rosamunde" by presenting them with a little daughter early Saturday morning, May 18th at Mercy hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Green are to be congratulated upon the advent of the small daughter and upon the fine condition of Mrs. Green this week. The young lady will be known as Sandra Myra.

——PLHS——

All Lomans wish to express their appreciation to the Point Loma High PTA for their masterly aid in putting over the Schubert opera "Rosamunde". The costumes are delightful. We're off to another performance for the State PTA at Russ auditorium at 8 o'clock on Tuesday evening, May 28.

The High school participation in the National housing contest for high school students yielded some two hundred papers from the classes of Mr. Doyle, Miss Clark, and Miss Naylor. The papers were eliminated to the ten best written by boys and the ten best written by girls. By oral tryouts these were eliminated to the following six contestants: Barbara Healy, Lucille Levin, and Janet Allen; Lawrence Wimber, Spencer Church, and Wilton Stewart. After further elimination by oral tryout Barbara Healy and Wilton Stewart hae been chosen to represent Point Loma high school in the county Better Housing essay contest at Roosevelt school at 8 o'clock Thursday evening, May 23.

OCEAN BEACH POST AMERICAN LEGION NO. 433 and AUXILIARY

Thursday evening. May 18. the Ocean Beach post and auxiliary of the American Legion held the first of a series of monthly POT LUCK suppers in their hall 1957 Abbott street. it was one of those get together affairs and a large attendance was on hand and thoroughly enjoyed.

The monthly card party held Saturday night was another of those enjoyable affairs which produced some real prizes, and our past commander E. E. Steele, who is donating a big capon to be given away in November says that it now weighs five and one-half pounds.

Building Program Employing Many

How loans made by Bank of America under the National Housing Act have aided employment in California is explained in an advertisement published this week in newspapers thruout the state.

Up to May 1, the bank has made housing loans in the total amount of $5,667,000. According to bank officials, 55 percent of this amount has been paid for labor engaged directly in building, repairing and modernizing California homes. An additional amount went to pay for the labor required to provide the materials and supplies used in construction.

Commenting on the showing, L. M. Giannini, president of Bank of America, said, "Our survey shows that thru housing loans made by our bank, 3,564,000 man-hours of employment have been created.

"This is particularly gratifying to us, as one of Bank of America's principal considerations in engaging in statewide activities in cooperation with the Federal Housing Administration was to stimulate employment as the principal necessity for business recovery."

Bank of America's advertisement, which is one of a series supporting the Federal Housing Program, shows that the bank's loans to date have resulted in the following proportions of man-hours of employment among the building trades: Tile setters, 75,000; iron workers, 16,000; electricians, 79,000; carpenters, 608,000; plasterers, 292,800; bricklayers, 163,200; plumbers, 254,400; laborers, 1,155,000; painters, 816,000 and roofers, 105,000.

Annual Poppy Sale Starts Sat. May 25

Saturday, May 25th will see the beginning of the annual Buddy Poppy sale by the Lieut. Bert A. Allen post and auxiliary No. 2415 in Ocean Beach. These flowers of remembrance are sold each year just prior to and on Memorial Day. While they by their very nature commemorate our nation's dead who lie Where Poppies Blow O'er Flanders Fields, they as well are a true expression of the motto of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. and their auxiliaries which is: "To Honor the dead by Serving the Living". Each and every one of these flowers is made by a disabled war veteran and is a source of some income to those so totally disabled as to be unable to perform any other labor. Also a part of the payment received from the sale of every poppy goes toward the support of the Veterans of Foreign Wars National Home for widows and Orphans at Eton Rapids, Michigan. The balance is placed in a special fund by the local post and auxiliary for use only in case of relief to families in need.

In the four years the local post has been in existence they have expended over one thousand dollars in cash for such relief here in our own locality. Some of the money received in the past sales of Buddy Poppies was utilized for relief of sufferers of the Long Beach earthquake. It may not be known to many at this time, and has been probably forgotten by some but the first truck load of relief supplies to enter Long Beach from out of town was an Ocean Beach truck secured by F. H. Kraft, then commander of the post and driven by two members of the local post. It contained food, clothing, blankets and medical supplies. Therefore when you are asked by one of the ladies to buy a Buddy Poppy you will know that every cent you give is utilized for relief of some sort and that the major portion will be spent or used locally.

Buy a Buddy Poppy and help us to "HONOR THE DEAD BY SERVING THE LIVING".

OCEAN BEACHERS WIN 23RD STRAIGHT GAME

Continuing its march through the ranks of San Diego County Baseball Managers' association teams, the Ocean Beach aggregation smothered Bert Stratton's Plasterers, 18 to 3, in an independent contest Sunday at Ocean Beach.

In recording its 23rd straight triumph, Ocean Beach was held to an even break in the first inning, but broke loose with a nine-run attack in the second. The game was called after seven cantos. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Ocean Beach	18	13	1
Stratton Plasterers	3	7	7

Next Sunday's game will be with Texas Liquor House team at Golden Hill park.

(From The Sermon on the Mount—The Book of Matthew.)

THE FLOOD TEST OF CHARACTER

(Matthew 7—24-29)

24. Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: 25. And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon the house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. 26. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: 27. And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it. 28. And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine: 29. For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the Lesson Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from the Psalms: "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God."

The Lesson Sermon includes these words of Paul to the Corinthians: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. . . . Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord: (for we walk by faith, not by sight:) we are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord."

Among the passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, are the statements: "When you say, 'Man's body is material,' I say with Paul: Be 'willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.' Give up your material belief of mind in matter, and have but one Mind, even God; for this Mind forms its own likeness."

WARREN WALKER SCHOOL

The swimming class which meets Tuesday afternoon at the YWCA is making rapid progress. Joycelyn Watters and Beverly Parks are learning surface diving. Gloria Johnson had her first lesson this week.

Charles Dixon has returned to the kindergarten class. Ruth Doggett and Parkie Burroughs are again in school after absences due to illness.

W.C.T.U. HELD INSTITUTE

The all day institute held Tuesday by the local W.C.T.U. was a very interesting meeting well attended.

Taking part in the program were Mrs. Mary Lynas, Mrs. Mary Woodworth, Mrs. Camell, Mrs. Lou Middlebrook, and Mrs. Mc Causland, president of the PTA.

The National W.C.T.U. have a concession and very fine exhibit at the Exposition. June 20 will be W. C.T.U. day.

JUST THE THING FOR AFTERNOON

PATTERN 9248

9248

The little peplum always gives a youthful air—but it's what's above the peplum that is the real news of this frock. The irregular yoke, the softening bits of shirring and the perky little collar make it one of the most to-be-admired afternoon dresses of the season. Because of its softness of line—the little details which Paris terms "dressmaker"—it is a dress becoming to most anybody. It really would be stunning in a sheer, finely woven cotton—as a printed batiste or handkerchief linen. In silk, any soft printed or solid pastel crepe. It's a dress that is really easy to make—the peplum may be omitted, of course.

Pattern 9248 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards 39 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

DEPLETION

"Do you think there is a chance of eliminating money from politics?"

"There should be," answered Senator Sorghum. "Some of the bosses out my way have done everything possible to take all there was out of it."

Disastrous Ending

Tom—An' just as he was about to save her from the burning building—

Jill—Did he save her? Did he save her?

Tom (disgusted)—I donno, the darn film caught fire and burned up.

Vain Regret

"What a change! The old lane replaced by a wide road, and there, Henry, just where we used to meet when courting, they've actually placed a traffic signal."

"I wish that red light had been showing then, Maria!"

He fell to the floor fighting, but his blows were weak, ineffective. A hand clutched at his throat and he tore at it with all his strength. The fingers shut down on the windpipe and he writhed under that agony, summoning all his courage, all his will to break free, to outlast that strangling pressure. But he could not do it. He went numb; his brain clouded. He lay still and then after a time, sweet air poured again into his lungs.

That was all of which he was aware for a long interval: air, bathing his tortured chest. Air, which had been denied him by the strangling grip of a man's hand.

That thought burned away the haze which enveloped him and he started to throw himself over, to rise, to be up and fighting. But he found that he was unable to move.

His hands were stretched out above his head; a harsh bond held each wrist helpless. He tried to kick and failed. His feet were locked together and held there as by a great weight.

A distinct odor pervaded the room. He groaned and strained again at his bonds.

Footsteps, then, came across the floor and Nicholas Brandon looked down at him in the dim light, a whisky bottle in his hand, swaying a bit on unsteady feet.

"So!" he grunted and laughed. "So you fell for it! So you followed your blessed Dawn, eh?" He went off into a tantrum of crazy laughter.

Ben twisted slowly against his bonds and discovered that the rope which bound him was wet. He could no more free himself without aid than he could hope to fly.

"It worked!" Brandon cried. "G—d, how it worked! 'Dawn!' you yelled like a fool, standing outside there. 'Dawn!' . . . And then stepped into my trap, eh?"

He sat heavily in a chair.

"It's all worked, even to the weather! You came alone. It's starting to snow. Nobody's nearer than the Hoot Owl and the smoke of a burning camp wouldn't be seen twenty rods a day like this."

He leered.

Smoke of a burning camp! Ben's racing thoughts connected that idea with the odor which filled the room. . . . His fingers felt the strands of hemp that stretched from his wrists to the posts of bunks against the wall. Surely, the rope had been soaked in kerosene. So it was Brandon's intent to leave him tied helpless, to fire the building. . . . Then his mind centered on thwarting the scheme of this ruthless man gone wholly mad. . . .

"Yeah. It worked . . . so far," he replied and grinned.

Brandon snorted in contempt.

"So far, yes; and on to the end, it'll work. You're tied fast, aren't you?"—leaning low so Ben could see the cruel lights in his eyes. "You're tied hand and foot! I'll touch the camp off. You'll roast . . . because this old camp'll burn like h—l itself! They'll find your bones here; they'll find an empty whisky bottle. That's all they'll find."

Brandon had schemed competently: no detail which would implicate him seemed to have been overlooked. Still, fear did not manifest itself in Elliott's heart; only contempt was there for a man so merciless. Contempt and a stout determination to stall for time.

"You're smart, Brandon," he said. "I'll admit that. The plan's so good I'm surprised that you overlooked a bet."

The other turned sharply.

"A bet?" he cursed derisively. "What d' you mean, a bet?"

"A little thing. A thing almost anybody might overlook. But it's bound to come to light if I don't show up, and one murder charge's as good as another. I'm talking about a letter Don Stuart wrote me just before he died."

"Its' a lie! Whatever he wrote was a lie!" Brandon's cry was shrill. "He was a drunken, lying bum!"

"Which, even if true, wouldn't matter so much, now. Once, it would have. A few weeks ago, it might have. But not now. . . . Things have changed in the Tincup country; people have changed. There are dozens who'd jump at the chance to make trouble for you, now, Brandon, and—"

"Lies can't hurt me, you fool." Brandon cried but his teeth rattled. "Plotting and scheming, were you, to drag that old case up and try to turn it against me? And basing it all on the death-bed ravings of—"

"But McManus isn't dead!" Ben cried, crowding all the conviction and triumph he could summon into his tone, playing his hunch to the utmost. "He's alive and we've located him"—lying himself, now, in an attempt to beat the truth from Brandon. "He's on his way back and what he'll have to tell, coupled with what old Don had the courage to put down in his own writing—"

"Stuart didn't know! He knew nothing, I tell you! He wasn't even here! He took Faxson's word for it and even Faxson didn't know. He was asleep in that room right there"—pointing—"and he came out while we were talking and Mac went crazy and—"

Elliott could not restrain the impulse to laugh in a wild shout of triumph.

"So you admit, as the rest of us now know, that McManus didn't throw himself into the river that night, eh? So you admit he still lives, do you?"

"Admit nothing . . . nothing. . . . He's a murderer, I tell you. . . . And I wasn't here . . . He's a murderer, I tell you. . . . And I wasn't here . . . wasn't here. . . ."

And back to the northward three people came through the darkening forest on Elliott's trail, bending low against the mounting storm. Two men were ahead, beating down a track for the girl who followed, pleading with them now and again for more speed.

Ben needed time, now; he spoke:

"I've a proposition, Brandon. How'd you like to trade? How'd you like to have Stuart's letter for, say, the use of my hands and feet for a minute?"

Brandon come slowly close and leaned over him.

"Mean that? Where is it?"—craftily.

"My affair." Even then, he could feel the bill-fold in his breeches pocket where old Don's letter reposed. "What d' you say?"

Brandon's fingers plucked at his lips.

"It's no good! It's a lie, but even if it weren't, it'd be no good in court." Then, sharply: "But what about McManus? Where's he? Where's he coming from? Yes, McManus! We might deal"—cautiously—"about McManus, Elliott. If you'd stop McManus I might . . . I might . . .

"For the letter. And for word of McManus, I might, Elliott. I might trade your liberty for—"

He checked himself with a grunt as if realizing that he had by his own words placed himself completely in Elliott's hands.

"But what assurance—" Ben began.

"To h—l with you and your questions!" Brandon snarled, straightening. "To h—l with you, Elliott! I'm not afraid of lies and McManus was so drunk he never knew what happened!

"They'll find your bones," he growled between teeth which remained clamped to still their rattling. "They'll find . . . after a while . . . your rotten bones."

From beneath the sink he dragged an oil can and sloshed its contents along the walls, across the floor, over Ben's body until Elliott lay in a pool of inflammable liquid.

"You crossed me!" Brandon cried, digging into a pocket.

"It's over now, you fool! It's the trail Faxson took for you! Cross Nick Brandon? H—l. . . ."

He took one step to a pile of oil-drenched debris against the oil-soaked wall. He bent forward to apply his torch and stopped, as if frozen, hand extended.

A shout outside; a body crashed against the door. It burst open and Tim Jeffers plunged into the room. Behind him came Martin and as Dawn slid down the steep drift to the entry the burning curl of tinder dropped to the floor and Brandon whirled.

"Get him, Tim!" cried Ben. "Nail him! Don't give him a chance!"

With a muffled shout Martin and Jeffers flung themselves on Brandon as he charged for the doorway. He screamed. He fought frantically, but quickly they bore him down.

"Take that!" Tim's voice bellowed. "'Nd that! 'Nd that!" The sound of knuckles on flesh came with the words. . . . Curses, inarticulate shouts, and then Dawn's frantic voice:

"Ben, where are you?"

The struggling ceased suddenly, with a long, gagging sound from Brandon.

Tim rose, looked around the room and moved to where Elliott's prone figure showed indistinctly in the gloom.

"Trussed up, Tim. Cut me loose. . . . Hurry! This is going to be a great party!"

A knife blade clicked open; the oil-soaked ropes parted. Ben lurched to his feet.

Dawn, running into the kitchen of the camp she knew so well, came back with a lamp, its reservoir half filled. The wick was lighted and the shadows of the room retreated.

"We seen the note," Jeffers muttered. "Dawn there, 'd come out. We suspected you were in trouble and—"

"Never mind about me, now," Ben broke in.

"But you're all that matters!" Dawn said. "Ben. . . . It was my note that decoyed you. It was an old one, written to him. He'd saved it."

Elliott smiled and covered her hands with his.

"Never mind anything that has to do with me. I'm only an accident in this. It's going to be a wonderful day, dear Dawn. This part is tough for you but . . ." He gave his head an emphatic twist, smiled at her in assurance, then, putting her gently aside, stepped close to Martin.

"Let him up, now. . . . Here. . . . Into this chair, Brandon." They lifted him, for the man seemed incapable of movement himself. "Sit still now. We're simply going to get a few little matters straight for these people."

He stood back a pace and rubbed his chin with a knuckle.

"We've got this citizen in quite a stew," he said. "He schemed to get me out here and did a good job." He looked at Dawn quickly. "I hadn't even had time to wonder about that note. It doesn't matter, though. You saw me tied, there; that rope's soaked with oil. The place is drenched with it. He was just touching her off when you three came in and it would have been as neat a murder as I've heard about in a coon's age!"

"A lie!" Brandon muttered. "Was only trying . . . trying . . . letter. . . ."

"Have you forgotten what you admitted to me, Brandon?" Ben asked sharply. "You gave it away, gave yourself away!"

"You fool, you! You think you've got me cold, eh? You've nothing on me that'll amount to a snap of my thumb!" His gaze went back to Dawn. "And I've watched you shrink and cringe all your life and I'm glad now that it's warped you and weakened you—"

"Hold your tongue, Brandon!"

That was Martin's voice breaking in, thickened and shaken with congested rage.

He advanced toward Brandon slowly. He halted and did not speak for a long moment. Eyes still fast on the other he reached toward the table, groping for a pair of rusted shears which lay there. A cloud came over Brandon's eyes and he blinked.

The Wick Was Lighted and the Shadows of the Room Retreated.

"And you'd taunt her with it! Because McManus disappeared!" Martin said slowly with low tensity. "Ah, it made a plausible case, Brandon. . . . It, and your stories. . . ."

Then he did a strange thing. He lifted those shears in a quick gesture to his chin and a lock of the thick beard fell away.

"And you'd make lives h—l because you held the power. . . . And you'd write to the hiding, skulking McManus for years and tell him she was gone. . . . that she was married . . . that she hated her father's name, eh?" Another lock of hair fell, and another. His blue eyes were burning, now, and Brandon's chin trembled as a look of horror crept into his face.

"But if he was to come back, Brandon, and swear to her with his own lips that he did not kill . . . swear so, to a girl like that . . . She'd believe him, wouldn't she? She'd believe him, wouldn't she, and be at peace. . . . At peace. . . . Ay, at peace with herself and . . . the one she loves."

He cut the last lock from the bearded jaw and flung away the shears. He stood erect, spreading his hands.

"See!" he cried. "See, Nick Brandon?"

The man in the chair made as if to rise. He could not. He lifted an arm as though to fend a blow.

"Denny!" he choked. "Denny McManus. . . . You're a d—d . . . you're a . . ."

He ended in a wild scream and cowered back against the wall, sobbing.

Beside Ben, Dawn was trembling. He put his arm about her and she sagged against him.

"So I wouldn't come back, eh?" the man they had known as Martin cried and whirled to face her. "I came, Dawn! I've come back to tell you that I'm not afraid. . . . That my heart's clean. . . ." He gathered her in his arms, dropped his cheek to her head and closed his eyes. "I'm no killer. I don't know who killed Faxson. Nick told me I did and I lost my head for an hour and then it was too late. . . . I've hidden for years because he's written me things, terrible things to read, little Dawn. But I couldn't stand it longer!"

"And a warrant!" Brandon croaked. "A warrant's here . . . there, in Tincup. Murder won't outlaw. . . . You'll pay . . . you'll pay. . . ."

McManus drew Dawn even closer.

"But you'll know, little Dawn! . . . You'll know!" he murmured.

"Wait!" cried Ben. "All of you! Listen! This . . . this . . . this thing, here, as much as admited to me that he killed Faxson himself! He was here in this cabin the night Faxson was shot. He was here, I'm telling you! He admitted it to me, not ten minutes ago!

"I don't know much about the rules of evidence"—tugging at the bill-fold in his pocket—"but I've a good guess about what Don Stuart had to tell the night he died, now that Brandon has trapped himself!" He shook the soiled, folded envelope from the purse. "I've had this thing for weeks and like a fool I didn't read it. . . .

"Listen!"

"I have been a coward," Ben read aloud. "McManus did not kill Faxson. Brandon did. Brandon had McManus drunk and was getting him to sign away his share of the partnership when Faxson tried to stop it. Brandon shot Faxson and when McManus was sober enough to understand, told him that he—McManus—had done it. McManus believed him. I don't know what became of McManus. Brandon came to me before Sam died and told me McManus had lit out and that if I did not swear that Faxson said McManus shot at him he would send me to the pen for stealing from the company. This is God's truth. I was afraid to do anything else. I have been a coward. I am sorry I did not tell this years before."

Brandon's head was twitching.

"Lie," he gasped. ". . . drunken bum. . . ."

"No lie, Brandon. It's truth!" Ben said without heat, quite soberly.

Tim Jeffers turned to McManus smiling gently, and as he moved Brandon sprang forward. With a wild cry he gained the doorway, snatched it open and plunged outside.

"Get him!" Tim cried and McManus followed, leaping out into the gloom of late afternoon. . . .

"Don't leave me alone! Not here, Ben!"

It was this cry of Dawn's which arrested Ben on the threshold. He turned to see her swaying dizzily.

"Hold me! Hold me close. . . . Ah, Ben, dear!"

Her arms clasped his neck and she began to cry softly.

"Easy!" he said unsteadily. "Easy, now! It's all over. . . . Everything's over!"

No sounds of the three who had fled into the darkness came for many minutes and then old Tim Jeffers stamped grimly into the room. He did not speak as the two looked inquiringly at him. He waited for the man who had been known as John Martin. . . . He came slowly, this man, breathing heavily.

"Compensation," he said in whisper as he advanced toward Dawn, arms outstretched hungrily. "The Mad Woman has him. . . . Here it started. . . . Into that river I was supposed to have gone, in a confession of murder. . . . There he went tonight. . . . We saw it, Tim and I. . . . We watched him swept under the ice. . . ."

* * * * * * * *

It was after midnight when the group assembled in the McManus home. Tim Jeffers, Able, Doctor Sweet, Denny McManus, Dawn and Ben Elliott sat rather silently in the long, low living room while Aunt Em busied herself in the kitchen.

The evening had been an ordeal, explaining, recording evidence; talking with the coroner, the sheriff, the young prosecutor; and though it had ended in triumph, when the prosecutor slowly tore to bits the old warrant for Denny McManus, the tragic facts with which they had been concerned took toll.

Little was said and when Aunt Em appeared, bearing a tray laden with glasses and a bottle, she walked into a hushed silence.

"Fiddlesticks, what folks you are!" she exploded. "Sittin' here like it was a funeral instead of about the happiest time this house has seen in a coon's age!

She passed the glasses and no one spoke. She took the last herself and looked around the circle of faces in disgust.

"Has the cat got all your tongues?" she demanded and Able chuckled and old Tim Jeffers smiled.

Still, no one spoke until after old Tim had said his say. He rose to his feet, a giant of a man in that low-ceilinged room. He eyed the clear wine in his glass and then looked about, lifting it in a little gesture of salute.

"Well," he said. . . . "Happy days!"

[THE END.]

Appeal to Honor

A terrible wreck occurred off the shores of Newfoundland. In the mad frenzy that followed the first shock of the collision, men forgot all else in their sense of self-preservation. An officer wearing the badge of the Legion of Honor was observed frantically pushing weaker ones aside to gain safety. A man stepped before him, pointing to the badge upon his breast. It was sufficient. The silent rebuke recalled him to himself. From that moment, self was lost sight of, and with undaunted heroism he sacrificed himself for the weak and helpless, and was seen at the last standing with folded arms on the deck of the doomed vessel in her last plunge to a watery grave, the badge of the Legion of Honor gleaming upon his breast.

Rash Disfigured Face

Disappeared After Using Cuticura

"A rash broke out on my face from some external irritation and spread very rapidly. The skin was red, and the rash burned and itched so that I scratched night and day. Then it developed into large spots or eruptions and disfigured my face.

"I tried different kinds of soaps, but had no success. I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to send for a free sample. The result was so good that I bought more, and after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment the rash disappeared." (Signed) Herbert B. Skyles, R. D. 1, Vintondale, Pa.

HAIL THREAT TO CROPS, EVEN IN TIME OF DROUTH

Neither drouth nor extreme heat stops hail storms. In 1934—a time of record-breaking dryness and high temperatures—hail damage to crops was as widespread and almost as severe as usual, according to the weather bureau. All the way from New York to California and from Florida to Montana hail beat into the ground crops that had escaped the drouth.

Hail, the coming of which cannot now be predicted, is a menace that hangs over all crops east of the Rockies, particularly in the Midwest. A hailstorm can reduce a promising field to a total loss in a few minutes. Hailstones, says Dr. W. J. Humphreys, of the weather bureau, are formed in the vigorously rising air of a thunderstorm. Raindrops are blown up to a level where it is so cold that they freeze. But the ascending air is puffy, so that many of the frozen lumps must make several excursions back and forth between the levels of snow and rain. All the time they grow larger and larger by capturing snow crystals in one level and raindrops in the other, until at last they are too large to be supported by the unrushing air and fall to the ground. Some of the hailstones that fell early last year were two inches in diameter. Later, in some places, they were the size of hen's eggs, while in still other places ice slabs as large as saucers were reported.

In 1934, as usual, the most destructive hailstorms occurred in June, July and August. Florida's hail season, however, began in February. By April the storms had spread to Oklahoma, Arkansas, and South Carolina. In May they were breaking out in Wisconsin. The extent of damage from hail in any one year can never be determined definitely. Estimates by the weather bureau, mostly from the outstanding storms, show a loss in 1934 of nearly $8,000,000—the heaviest since 1930, when it was $10,000,000.

No very serious hailstorms have been reported by the weather bureau so far this year.

LOVE BEGETS LOVE

A pleasant smile
Will oft beguile
A tear of tender nature.
I must confess
I love to press
A friendly hand when meeting.
Why should we hate
And then berate
The lack of cordial greeting.
We make or break
A give and take
In needed daily lessons.
Let smiles abound
When looking around
To cheer the weary travelers.
It helps them bear
Their load of care
In times of stress and sorrow.

Appreciate Efforts In Rosamunde Success

The pastoral operetta presented at Point Loma high school last Thursday and Friday was attended by a capacity house Thursday evening and Friday night, for the first time in the history of the school, people had to be turned away, as facilities of the auditorium were all taken up early in the evening. About 800 people attended the Friday presentation.

Under the able direction of Myron B. Green, the orchestra of more than sixty members thrilled the audience with the opening overture, then followed the colorful dance of shepherds and shepherdesses which was thoroughly appreciated and brought considerable applause. The solo and duet numbers as well as the choruses by the students were well presented, considering none had been given private instruction and their voice training had been limited to school training. The Maypole dance in the first act was a very graceful diversion. The ballet of the second act was presented in a delightfully artistic manner and the boys' scimitar dance was especially good. An outstanding selection was the violin solo number of "Ave Maria" by Robert Davis, court musician. The orchestrations in the melodramatic finale of the first act and the close of the second act were inspiring to the large interested audience.

Patrons of Point Loma high school and parents of attending students should be especially appreciative to the director of music, Mr. Green; to W. E. Shepherd, director of stagecraft and acting, and to all who spent so many hours in instruction of the cast. A great amount of work was also done by Point Loma PTA officers and members in making the costumes and teachers in directing publicity; also to many others connected with the school from 7th grade to alumni.

KIWANIANS SEE SAN DIEGO FROM THE AIR

Milton Lancaster was charman of Kiwanis luncheon Wednesday, having for his program, Ellsworth Whalen and Douglas Hubbs, showing San Diego seen from an airplane. Ellsworth is a graduate of Point Loma high, at which institution he received the Marion Davies scholarship for an essay on aviation. This start made it possible for him to qualify as an aviator and Douglas Hubbs, senior at Point Loma high school, has a weakness for the same sport, so the boys have teamed up and when opportunity offers they hire a plane and go sailing over San Diego city, harbor and vicinity. The boys are taking photos and now have a collection worth seeing, which they project onto a screen to give a clearer view. The boys explained the various types of airplanes, being familiar with most American makes, and described their pictures which were good views of the city, Balboa park, the harbor and metropolitan area.

Dr. Falk of La Jolla and Mr. Root, both SERA Forum workers, were guests of Dr. Felt.
